What is inside this collection

The set is built so that no two pages feel alike. There are quiet scenes for a rainy afternoon, like the mermaid resting at a lagoon waterfall or the one at her coral mirror, and busy ones full of movement, like the dolphin leap and the somersault inside a swirl of little fish. Sea friends get their own pages too: a seahorse to ride, a patient sea turtle, a narwhal with its long spiral horn, a round friendly octopus and a whale so big the mermaid beside it looks tiny. For anyone who wants pattern rather than story, the mermaid mandala, the zentangle portrait and the scale by scale tail close up fill an evening on their own.

Coloring ideas for an underwater scene

Water gives you permission to use colors you would never put on a land drawing, so start with the tail. Teal into violet, or lime into turquoise, looks like real fish scales if you keep each row of scales one shade apart instead of coloring the whole tail flat. Hair is the second big decision: seafoam green, coral pink and silver blue all work, and a single warm color in the hair makes it pop against a cool tail. Leave the pearls and the bubbles almost white with one light grey edge and they will read as shiny. For backgrounds, a pale blue wash behind everything ties the page together, and a few darker blue streaks at the top suggest sunlight coming down through the water. Markers need thicker paper (cardstock) so they do not bleed through; crayons, pencils and gel pens are happy on plain printer paper. More advice is in our how-to-print guide.

The best page for every age

Toddlers should start with Easy Mermaid: extra thick lines, one big friendly figure and three round bubbles, nothing fiddly. Kids from about four to eight usually go straight for the dolphin, the seahorse ride, the baby mermaid in her shell cradle and the treasure chest. Older kids and grown-ups tend to pick the mandala, the zentangle portrait or the art nouveau page, which color like a pattern rather than a picture. Planning a mermaid party? Print a stack of the tail close up and let every guest invent their own scales. Printing for a class is fine too, the details are in our licensing policy.

More magical coloring

If the underwater world won you over, our unicorn coloring pages bring the same magic back on to dry land with rainbow manes and fairytale castles, and our dragon coloring pages trade fins for wings and scales you can color in any color you like. Crowns and ball gowns live with our princess coloring pages, and every magical collection sits together on our fantasy coloring pages hub, where new creatures always land first.

How to print

Every page is sized for US Letter and prints on A4 without cropping if you set your printer to "fit to page". Print single-sided so colors do not show through, and use cardstock if you plan to use markers. There are no watermarks and no sign-up, on any page.

Terms of use

Free for personal, classroom and library use. Print as many copies as you need. Please do not re-sell these pages or re-host the file: link to the collection page instead, so the book stays up to date.
